Within Humanities students will receive a diverse education in the culture of the world. The course load is writing heavy and built on critical analysis. This pathway is designed for those students looking to pursue a career as an educator, researcher, writer, lawyer, or any number of other higher academic careers. The pathway is meant to be customizable to fit each student's needs. Those interested in Religion or Art, for example, may choose electives and substitute individual courses to create a more disciplined-focused area of study.

Students with questions pertaining to the Humanities are encouraged to contact Brandon Montgomery, Professor and Curriculum Coordinator of Humanities.
